

Volunteer Spotlight: Deepak Shamarao Managing Director, AIG

Apparo volunteer since 2015 and donor since 2017, Deepak has delivered powerful impact to nonprofits.

2015: Supported Habitat for Humanity in their efforts to improve and expand their fundraising, also became advocate for Apparo amongst his colleagues at his former employer

2017: Delivered technology assessment and plan to improve mission-focused effectiveness at Opera Carolina

2018: Conducted technology assessment and delivered plan for improvement of processes to Habitat for Humanity

2020: Became Apparo volunteer advocate at AIG

2021: Helped Samaritan's Feet address their technology and infrastructure pain points through an assessment and plan

2021: Served as volunteer judge for Apparo's Mission Possible Award program

"I continue to serve and advocate for others to volunteer with Apparo because I see the benefits for our team. I support the horizontal organization at AIG and I appreciate bringing people together as one company to solve problems. Cross-functional internal projects can get stuck when people don't know how to navigate across the company. These nonprofit engagements give people a way to rally together around the nonprofit and giving back. This breaks down barriers and organizational silos, bringing us together as one AIG. Everyone who participates in an Apparo volunteer engagement is ecstatic about it." - Deepak Shamarao

"We didn't know what we didn't know. We just had a feeling that things were not quite what they needed to be. Without [Deepak & AIG's support], to a large degree, we would be limping along and performing guesswork to improve our situation. [They] went far above and beyond my expectations. They were unbelievably thorough around every facet of the entire process, helping us put steps in action." - Angela Carlson, Executive Director of Finance & General Manager, Samaritan's Feet
